

THE CHINOOK ADVANCE

Vol. 22

Chinook, Alberta, Thursday, Dec. 17th 1942

The Dominion Government have made it very easy for the citizens of this community to demonstrate their patriotism during this Christmas Season. In the Post Offices and Banks are very attractive Christmas Cards, with a space for the attachment of War Saving Stamps and Certificate. These cards are as attractive as many which can be purchased in the Stores throughout the District, and have the saving grace of being free.

All that is necessary is that the citizen go to the Bank or Post Office and ask for Christmas Cards, and insert therein one 25 cents War Saving Stamp, or more if they are so inclined, and send to their various friends a present which has a future.

We are sure that every citizen who has the welfare of the Country at heart, will be utilizing this method of conveying their Christmas greetings to their friends.

THE WEEK IN EDMONTON

Correspondence received by the Provincial Field Crops Branch would indicate that many farmers are intending to seed flax in 1943. No doubt there will be an opportunity for increasing the acreage of this crop.

Farmers who have been accustomed to growing wheat and coarse grains will encounter some difficulties with this new crop. Many adjustments will have to be made to ordinary grain cleaning equipment before weed seeds can be removed from flax. Some farmers will find that it is easier to obtain clean seed than to attempt to clean their own own flax to a seed standard. If seed is to be purchased, it would be well to make arrangements for supplies now while stocks are still available.

The Extension Branch of the Department of Agriculture has a supply of Bulletins on "The Production of flax in Alberta" which will be supplied free of charge upon request.

CARD OF THANKS

To the members of the Chinook Red Cross I wish to convey my heartfelt thanks for lovely large Christmas parcels and greeting, everything arrived as declared and so nicely packed. It surely brought Christmas cheer and old memories of dear friends. Hope this gets to Chinook in time to wish you all a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Yours Truly

What might have proved to be a very serious accident occurred to Mr. W. Agar of Cereal; when his horse ran over him. Mr. Agar is in the Cereal Hospital and is improving as well as can be expected.

Miss Emily Zawasky who spent the past three weeks with friends in Vancouver, returned Tuesday.

Mrs. Zawasky and Jean were Calgary visitors this week.

Mr. Bruce Barros was a Calgary visitor last week.

Mr. Nick Smith returned on Tuesday from Calgary after having visited with his brother in that city.

The weather last week was quite mild but the more severe has returned.

By Dr. K. W. Neashy, Director, Agricultural Department, North-West Line Elevators Association

Pulling First Things First

When this Department was organized, nearly three years ago, we decided that besides providing farmers with various information and specific services, we would put it our weight behind what we considered the two most pressing agricultural problems. These were: (1) weeds and (2) soil erosion.

Only the other day, a new book entitled "Weed Control" reached our office. This book quotes a report, prepared in 1930 by the Agricultural Service Department of the United States Chamber of Commerce, in which estimates of losses of farmers due to various causes are given. Of 30 items of waste, soil erosion was given first place and weeds second. The following figure shows a losses in the United States are interesting:

- 1. Diseases of live-stock (not including deaths from eating poisonous plants) $ 250,000,000
- 2. Plant diseases (10 leading crops plus forest trees) $1,100,000,000
- 3. Insect pests of plants and animals $1,125,000,000
- 4. Weeds $3,000,000,000

Of course, erosion losses are far greater and, worse still, permanently injure or ruin the land. One of these days—we hope soon—we shall learn what sort of acreage policy or guidance the government will undertake. Farmers, elevator companies, butchers, bakers and candle-stick makers all depend on the land. It is high time all realized that the land is being damaged. Summerfallowing aggravates erosion unless very carefully done, and coarse grains do no good unless fed on the farm and the manure returned to the land.

This is not white-collar theory, but hard reality. What shall we do about it? In the next issue we shall offer a few suggestions.

The Wedding Dance which was sponsored by the two bridegrooms, Mr. Lester Marr and Mr. Jack Lee on Friday, Dec. 11th, was a grand success.

Both having been brought up in Chinook, and whom have always had the respect of everyone, a very large number turned out.

The two brides looked very charming dressed in their wedding gowns.

Mr. and Mrs. August Rosenau and son Teddy were Calgary visitors last week.

Mrs. Davis was a Calgary visitor last week and returning Tuesday morning.

CHAPTER X.

Large kept busy, believing activity in anne doses would be the cure for a broken heart. She spent the morning seeing to the comforts of the guests, bringing her bookkeeping up to date, by joining in the evening room conversation at lunch. That afternoon she drove to town for a supply of food, going in place of Burke whose errand it really was to have been. She talked to Burke before getting into the station wagon.

"Did you see Mr. Blake off Burke?" She tried to be casual about it. "His leaving was unexpected. He was called away on business."

"I didn't take Mr. Blake into the station," he said. "He wanted to get out about five miles from town. Said he liked to walk early in the morning."

Anne nodded, got into the car. She could picture Erick walking along that lonely road, obviously in the direction of Sand Flats. A gladstone bag belonging to her father was missing; so Erick would be carrying that for appearances, and to smuggle away the small store of food missing from the kitchen. She well knew that he had not gone on to the town; certainly, after Burke had turned back toward Halfway House. Erick had left the car and had gone into the trackless forest—making for the mountains. Making for Mexico, farther away than he perhaps guessed. Anne could not see him, and suddenly Erick Kurper seemed closer to her and more important to her than ever had in years of casually accepted friendship.

It was three miles along the road that she came upon Jud riding a mule. She had the half-amused thought that never before had she seen a scarecrow mounted on to the town. Nor had she ever seen so disreputable a scarecrow. Jud's ugly yellow dog trotted dejectedly behind the mule. The strange company drew to one side as the station wagon approached, then Jud gestured when he recognized Anne. She halted the car alongside him. His bewildered face had a dark and bony look, a tobacco-stained grin.

"Saw Mr. Blake drive by with your man this morning," he said. "Your man drove back without him. Mr. Blake leaving Halfway House?"

Anne had a sudden suspicion. "Yes," he never told you his name. Who did tell you?"

"Reckon I heard it when I was at the hotel the other night."

"You don't reckon someone told you?"

"Well, it might've been."

"Was it Miss Marshall? The pretty dark-haired girl?"

"Guess there ain't no harm in saying yes," the man drawled.

Anne looked at him with thinly concealed distaste. It didn't matter that Rhea Marshall and he had talked, but Anne was driven by a strange curiosity to know why Rhea had been interested.

"I guess I understand," she said. "She overheard you and me discussing one of the guests that night. After I started for town she talked with you. She wanted to know what you knew, and you told her how a man, then a guest at Halfway House, had another night hidden himself in my station wagon in town—when he had been dressed in clothes suggesting an escaped prisoner. You know there was an escaped prisoner in the vicinity of Sand Flats, and guessed he was that prisoner. You told that girl all that."

"She said she knew all about him—at first," Jud muttered uncomfortably. "Then she offered me fifty dollars to point out the man. She took me up to the verandah and I pointed him out for her. She knew. She said his name was Blake." He grinned crookedly. "Can't blame a

He reached out, gave her arm an encouraging squeeze, smiled. Then he turned and went across the street in the direction of Sheriff Hardy's office. Anne stood there alone for a long moment, feeling worse than before meeting Bill McRae.

Steve Hayes had been haunting the timber burn ever since evidence had been turned up pointing to incendiaries. Having seen rich stands of forest destroyed, having seen men die fighting such fires, he hated firebugs with an inviolate violence. He wanted to find the man who had set that fire; he wanted to send that man to prison. He rode back to Squaw Creek in midafternoon, after finding the coat and necktie among some rocks on the edge of the lake and not far from the scorched place in the watershed. The coat and necktie were evidence.

He saw the strange horse standing with reins down before the administration building when he rode by to the corral to put up his own mount. And there, returning about, he saw Rhea in the doorway.

The girl stepped from the threshold, a smile wavering on lips that had been and were enticing. She stopped him by putting her hand on his arm. She was in riding clothes, mannish shirt and jodhpurs, and that was how he had first seen her, four years ago, when he had lost his head over her. She looked just as desirable. He hardened his heart.

"Don't look at me like that, Steve," Rhea said. "Please! Don't hate me, darling." Fears melted her eyes, and he had never seen her cry before. "I've learned my lesson, Steve. I've come back, and I'm your wife, and you've got to be decent. I'm only asking for another chance. Can't you give me that much?"

He looked at her stonily. His hands were closed viselike on the rolled-up coat he held. He wondered how it was possible that once he had wanted her so much and now wanted her so little. He neither loved nor hated her now; there was no feeling for her.

He said flatly, "What do you expect of me, Rhea? I told you last night that I'm in love with someone else. I can give you nothing—none of the things you want or are accustomed to, not even love."

"I want you to accept me as your wife, Steve. I'll make things up to you. I'll make you love me again—and make you happy."

He said nothing, merely stared at her in that stony way. Rhea lifted her hands in a pleading way. The tears spilled over onto her cheeks.

"Steve," she sobbed, "you can't abandon me!"

"No," he said. "I can't abandon you." He looked away from her. "We'll talk about this later. I've work to do now."

He stepped past her and walked into the building, not seeing the victorious smile that came to the girl's face.

Bill McRae was in the radio room. He gave a sour grin, saying, "I've got a vision pal." Then "That Blake guy checked out of Halfway House early this morning. I went down to Sand Flats, and the station agent said no stranger took the morning train. That doesn't mean Blake couldn't have had someone to meet him with a car. But he looks in the clear, Steve. I talked to Anne."

Steve cut him short with a grunt. He unrolled the coat, took the necktie from its pocket. The coat was a gray tweed, the tie a solid blue. He hung them onto a chair.

"I found this stuff near the burn," he said. "Blake was wearing that coat and tie or exact duplicates—the first day I saw him at Halfway House. I'm going to have a talk with that guy—no matter where he went."

"Anne says he was at the fire, helping to fight it."

"That's probably what he told her. Bill McRae stared at him. 'Steve, are you out to get this Blake because Anne is friendly with him?'"

And Steve Hayes said, "I'm out to get him because I think he's a crook. His being Anne's friend doesn't matter one way or another."

SMILE AWHILE

Mistress—Nora, I understand that you have a model husband.

Nora—Shure, mum, he's the finest a girl could have. If you could see the way he treats me, mum, ye'd be after saying he were a friend instid of a husband.

Housewife—And are you really content to spend your life walking around the country begging?

Tramp—No, ma'am, many's the time I wished I had a car.

Wife—I want some money.

Husband—Say, what did you do with that last dollar I gave you?

Wife—I spent thirty cents in 1936, forty cents in 1937, and twenty-three cents in 1938.

He—No woman ever takes another woman's advice about frocks.

She—Naturally. You don't ask the enemy how to win the war.

"So, he said I was a polished gentleman, did he?"

Well, yes. It meant the same thing.

"Ah! What was the exact word?"

"He said you were a slippery fellow."

Jeweller—Here's a nice little diamond for a dollar.

Prospective Bridegroom—Well, it's O.K., but haven't you got imitation ones cheaper?

Young Man—I want to buy a diamond ring.

Salesman—Yes, sir. How about one of our combination sets? Three pieces: Engagement, wedding and teething.

"So your name is McDonald!"

"Yes. And you want to change it to Laurie Maurice Stevenson. Tell me why you want to do that."

"It's my wife's idea. She thinks I ought to have the same initials that are on our spoons and towels."

Seaman—An' there I sees a torpedo, lady, 'adn' straight for us.

Lady Listener—Dear me! I do hope it was one of ours!

Judge—You say you have known the defendant all your life. Tell the jury whether you think he would be guilty of stealing this money."

Witness—How much was it?

Witness—You says of today you took too much money. Do you know what I was getting when I married your aunt?

Drummer Boys—No, and we'll bet you didn't, either.

JOLLY GAMES FOR YOUR NEXT PARTY

Your Guests Go A-Hunting

What's this? Big game hunters routed by a toy mouse? These hilarious goings-on are called "On Safari," and it's a grand game to play at your next party.

Pre each guest a toy gun—or one cut from cardboard—and announce a prize for the largest bag of game to be caught in 30 minutes. Lions and tigers count 25, elephants and giraffes 10, mice one point.

You have previously hidden about the room pictures of animals cut from inexpensive children's books. But more fun to have the mice mechanical ones, let them scuttie suddenly on the scene! For the biggest kill, award a toy elephant.

Another rollicking game is "Who Am I?" On the name of a famous person on back of each player, and let him learn his identity by asking questions: "Am I dead yet?" "What's my claim to fame?" Give a tin horn to the first to guess his name.

And don't forget to try "Magic Writing." Card Toss Fortune's.

345,000 Tons Of Sugar Beets In Southern Alberta This Year

We have come to take our best sugar industry in Southern Alberta pretty much for granted, but there are a few facts about the 1942 crop which we should bear in mind just as we keep them in their proper perspective.

We grew 345,000 tons of sugar beets this year on some 27,000 acres.

By the time the run in the plants finishes some time in January we will have manufactured 110,000,000 pounds of sugar.

Farmers will receive some $3,100,000 as their share of the sugar money, of which, of course, they will have to pass along nearly a million dollars to beet labor.

The retail price of the sugar will be very close to $10,000,000 at the selling price of about nine cents a pound.

The Government will collect from this in excise taxes about $1,650,000.—Lethbridge Herald.

World's largest bookstore is in London, while the second largest is said to be in Helsinki, Finland.

Breaks Long Record

Night-Blooming Cereus Opened In Broad Daylight This Year

Old Faithful had nothing on the night blooming cereus owned by Edward Volk of Cleveland, until this year.

For 42 years the flower has opened, once a year, approximately at midnight, and closed its bloom at sunrise.

The 1942 edition, however, skipped the nocturnal blooming and opened in broad daylight.
